

Princeton Quadrangle Club Report

Princeton Prospect Foundation – Thursday February 20th, 2013

Undergraduate Representative: Stefanie Webb, Vice-President

❖ Community Service and Sustainability

- Quad continues to recycle its leftover cardboard, plastic, glass and food.
- Quad continued to partner with the USG and Alcohol Initiative to host events. In the past, these have included concerts hosted in partnership with USG at Lawnparties.
- Quad is sponsoring the RedCross Blood Drive by providing advertising and incentives for participants.
- This summer a greenhouse was erected in the backyard. This is now being used to grow some of our own herbs and produce.
- Quad is participating in TruckFest this April through the ICC.
- Quad puts on its own annual charity auction whereby members donate items or actions for other members to bid upon.

❖ Technology and Entertainment

- Quad continues to have wireless Internet service for all members to access on their laptops.
- Quad's game room has one of each of the three major gaming consoles, with games for each. Members are often seen relaxing from a long day by playing Super Smash Brothers, Fifa, or Dead Rising 3.
- Our tech chairs have continued to support and update Quadstream. With this program, members can access movies and TV shows from any computer or TV hooked up to the Internet within Quad. It also allows members to stream music from our central file system to the speakers in the dining room and dance floor.
- We implemented a keyless lock system to heighten the security of the house and make the members feel more secure.
- The Quad website has recently undergone a significant upgrade, and has merged with the alumni webpage. Our website committee has created a content management system (CMS).
- Last year, Quad upgraded the printer to print to All Clusters so students can print from anywhere.

❖ Educational Aspects

- We work to bring more professors to speak to our members.
- Occasionally a Spanish Language Table will be organized. As many of our members have an interest in American Sign Language, we expect to host an ASL Language Table in the future.
- Our members have always been very enthusiastic about using the house as a study space. The small library was recently converted into a thesis-writing workspace for the seniors. The desks in the large library are typically full during the day. There are also many other study spaces throughout the house that members use regularly: the downstairs lounge, the gold room, the solarium, the billiards room, the grand salon couches, and the dining area.

❖ Soda and Water Project

- Quad continues to advertise non-alcoholic drink options during each party and event, such as water and soda—with non-alcoholic punch available for members. In addition, we serve dozens of varieties of non-alcoholic drinks at special members-only events.
